A Greater Statesboro

How often have we sat in a banquet hall and listened to a speaker, with a full head of steam painting rosy dreams and seeing visions of a greater Statesboro.

Quite often, to be sure, we have heard this sort of thing. After it is over, however, how many of us acted upon the suggestions, meeting together and planning the building of a greater community?

A greater community can be achieved by us if we work together in the hope that future generations will enjoy this town and if we are determined to crown our efforts with our community to be a thriving, progressive and glorious place in which to live, and we owe much to those who have gone before us who have lived here.

It must be remembered that we have accepted not only what the former citizens of our community have left us, but all the gifts of all the men who ever lived, and this is a considerable inheritance—for which we have paid nothing.

All of this inheritance came to us in our home community, and it is to our home community that

Newspaperman's Prayer

One of the famous and oft quoted messages having to do with the profession of journalism is the Newspaperman's Prayer, written by Bob Considine of International News Service. Since this week is National Newspaper Week we take this occasion to reproduce it here and to reaffirm our own belief in the journalist's creed. And certainly we would use this opportunity to pledge to our readers and to the community generally "our best" in producing the kind of local paper that they want and to which the finest community and the finest people in the world are entitled to.

The prayer follows:

"Dear God:

"May I be fair. Circumstances and luck have placed in my thimble a degree of authority which I may not fully comprehend. Let me not profane it.

"Give me the drive that will make me check and counter-check the facts. Guide me when, lost for want of a ruler or a lead, I stumble through the jungle of speculation. Grant me, as the poet said:

"The courage to change,
The things I can change;
The serenity to accept
Those I cannot change;
And the wisdom to know the difference."

"The 26 sharp-edged tools we call our alphabet can do what other tools do; build or destroy. Let me build. Let me know clearly what must be destroyed, what darkness, what bigotry, what evil, what curse, what ignorance.

"But above all, dear God, let me write with the fairness that Christ would have used if He, who stood for everything that has made this nation great, had ever found it necessary to sit down to a typewriter and beat out a story."—Bob Considine.

St. Paul tells the results of love:

"Love is very patient, very kind;
Love knows no jealousy;
Love makes no parade, gives itself no airs, is never rude, never selfish, never irritated, never resentful.

Love is never glad when others go wrong;
Love is always eager to believe the best, always hopeful, always patient. Love never disappears."

THE GREAT PANACEA

Let's panacea a beautiful word! When you pronounce it, the sound is gentle and soothing, like the wail of a summer breeze.

The word has an interesting history. It is derived from the Greek word for medicine, panacea, which means the all-healing-one.

The panacea for all the ills of the world is love; and love is the only law we need.

Have you read the 13th Chapter of First Corinthians lately? The word charity means love, — in its broadest sense.

If our love were great enough, we could even get along with the Russians and the Chinese, — love them as brothers. Then there would be no fear of a nuclear bomb. But greater miracles have happened in this unattested, topsy-turvy world.

St. Paul tells the results of love:

"Love is very patient, very kind;
Love knows no jealousy;
Love makes no parade, gives itself no airs, is never rude, never selfish, never irritated, never resentful.

Love is never glad when others go wrong;
Love is always eager to believe the best, always hopeful, always patient. Love never disappears."

Muscles Controlled By Brains May Be School Asset

George Watson

In all of the hullabaloo over the public school program the competitive sports program has come to be a well loved target for the academic extremist. Somehow they seem to leave the impression that any one who is an athlete has no brains and that our athletic team members are riding through high school and college on the backs of their brains.

I want to lift my voice in defense of the muscles controlled by brains. What we need to do is strengthen our whole physical education program but not at the expense of the students who are physically and mentally capable of participating in sports and a sprightly carriage are not to be underrated as business aids to winning friends and influencing people. The nice part about the sound body is that more often than not it also houses a sound mind.

After watching football practice in a good high school in the state of Georgia I was ready to tip my hat to the brains behind the muscles on that football field. Evidently it takes more than sheer bulk to control a team in a football game. It takes precision, concentration, coordination, and a good memory that does not go blank under pressure. In other words, it takes alert intelligence. Without brains to order the muscles around there is no team. And the muscles have to be housed in the same body with the muscles. No coach is in control after that squad goes on the field.

I talked to the coach of this high school team. It was quite a surprise to me to find that not only is he interested in his team's weight and speed, but he also looks for brains. I asked what he thought about the "cut out the competitive sports" move that is being voiced in some quarters. His reply: "Our schools made the mistake of cutting out foreign language a few years ago because so few pupils took them. Now we are on the long trail back. In other words, some things for a few pupils must be in our school programs. If the good students can take the special things why not let them? Schools and communities have no stronger unifying force than these teams we coach. What we need to do is strengthen our whole physical education program but not at the expense of the students who are physically and mentally capable of participating in sports and a sprightly carriage are not to be underrated as business aids to winning friends and influencing people. News of the Farm Bureau

(By Roy Powell, County Agent)

CONSERVATION RESERVE

Notice to farmers considering placing part of their farm land in the Conservation Reserve of the Soil Bank for 1959. October 3 is the deadline date for applying for a payment rate on such farm land. October 24 is the deadline date for requesting a contract after the payment rate has been received.

A number of farmers in the county may still be considering placing land in the Conservation Reserve. If you are one, don't let the October 3 date slip up on you.

If you are undecided about whether you want to place part of your farm land in the Conservation Reserve, here are 10 questions prepared by Extension farm management specialists, Steve Brannen and Jack Lancaster that can help you decide. If, after studying and answering these questions, you are still unsure, contact my office and I can give you some additional ways of reaching this important decision.

Here are the questions. I suggest that you study them carefully before you decide. The more you answer "yes" have and the more emphatic your "yes" answers are, the more likely putting land into Conservation Reserve will be to your advantage.

1. Are your crop yields usually lower than average for your community?

2. Are crop failures common in your area or with your system of farming?

3. Do prices of the products you sell vary a great deal from year to year?

4. Is your investment in land high as compared with buildings and equipment?

5. Could you reduce crop acreage with out seriously upsetting your farm business?

6. Would your costs be reduced a great deal if you grew fewer acres of crops?

7. Are you in need of a tenant or of hired help that you cannot find?

8. Do you, because of your age or health, need to reduce your farming operation?

9. Are you considering off-farm employment - or increasing the amount if you already do some work off the farm?

10. Would you like to quit farming but continue to own your farm and live on it?

RECORD YIELDS

On the basis of harvests already in, the Georgia Crop Reporting Service expects record high yields for Georgia of cotton, corn and peanuts. Cotton yield per acre is estimated at 380 pounds of lint. The average corn yield of the state is expected to reach 30 bushels per acre. The estimated average peanut yield of 1,125 pounds per acre also is a record high for the state.

Of course, there are too many farmers whose production falls below these averages and some sections of the state did not fare as well as others. Too dry weather during the past few weeks, however, has been somewhat damaging to pastures, soybeans and late hay.

Soils are still dry to very dry over much of the state. Land preparation and seeding of small grains and winter pastures have been delayed. In fact, long, steady, soaking rains would be most welcome in nearly all parts of Georgia now.

W. E. Dillard, president and general manager of the Central of Georgia Railway, received the E. H. Harriman Safety Certificate of Commendation in behalf of the railroad at ceremonies in New York September 17. The Central received the award for having the best safety record in the South among medium-sized railroads in 1957.

Shown at the presentation, left to right, Leonard D. Jackson, editor of The Right Way, Central's monthly publication; Mr. Dillard; James C. Lyne, chairman of the Harriman Awards Committee and editor of Railway Age; O. D. Page, director of safety and assistant to the general manager; and H. C. Osburn, general claim agent, of the Central of Georgia Railway.

For the third time in six years, the Central of Georgia Railway has received an E. H. Harriman Memorial Award for outstanding performance in the field of railroad safety.

The commendation, one of 15 given to various railroads in the country, was presented to Central's president, W. E. Dillard, at ceremonies in New York September 17. Central's record in 1957 was tops among the South's medium-sized railroads.

The coveted gold medals and certificates of commendation are presented annually by the American Museum of Safety through its Harriman Memorial Awards Committee.

Representing the Central of Georgia at the awards ceremony were, W. E. Dillard, president and general manager; Savannah, A. W. Benkert, member of the board of directors; New York; Alan Brown, eastern traffic manager; New York.

AUGUSTA'S 207 year old building, the White House, center of hard fighting during the Revolution and the site of the murder of 13 patriots, will soon be restored by the Georgia Historical Commission. The 500 acre tract of land on which the White House was built was granted by King George II to Daniel Clark and Lachlan McGillivray.

Patriots under General Elijah Clark besieged this house, known as McKay's Trading Post, September 14-18, 1780, after the British and their Indian allies had taken refuge there. Its walls were reinforced with mud, portholes were cut, and windows boarded up.

Surviving is one daughter, Miss Glennis Lee of Brooklet.

Funeral services were held last Friday at 3:30 p.m. at Brooklet Baptist Church with Rev. Kent L. Gillenwater, Rev. Ernest Deal and Rev. E. L. Harrison officiating. Burial was in the Brooklet Cemetery.

Smith-Tillman Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Study Ways To Control Synovitis

Chickens with established cases of infectious synovitis generally have not responded to treatment. Adding an antibiotic, chlorotetracycline, to feed, prevented further spread of the disease in an infected flock and brought some improvement in infected birds, according to a report in the Journal of the American Veterinary Medical Association.

Veterinary researchers feeding the drug continuously at 11 gm. per ton of feed before experimental infection was started, limited the number of birds affected by infectious synovitis, the report said. The strength of the causative agents influenced the effectiveness of the treated feed.

The age of birds also had an influence on the severity of the disease, according to the report. Birds affected when three weeks of age showed a greater reduction in their rate of growth and ability to use feed than birds becoming infected at five weeks of age.

Look of the future on highways of new-type concrete

"I drove the new-type, sound-conditioned concrete—and couldn't believe my ears!"

The true cost of your new highways

It all depends on how long they last. New-type concrete has a life expectancy of 50 years and more. First cost is moderate. Maintenance costs are lower than for any other type of pavement. That's why tax dollars go farther with concrete.

Reports JOHN CAMERON SWAYZE, noted TV and radio news analyst

"No thumb on this continuous-cast concrete. It's bringing the riding comfort of 1975 now."

Sound-conditioned concrete has no joints... only tiny, sewed-in cushion spaces. You don't feel or hear flat, concrete stays flat... and it's the safety pavement. Concrete's grainy surface gives dependable skid-resistance, rain or shine... its light color gives far better visibility at night.

Only concrete can be matched to future traffic loads. It's the preferred pavement for the Interstate System and other important new primary roads.
